The Cat and the Cherub Chester B. Fernald,2018-01-30 Excerpt from The Cat and the Cherub: And Other Stories Hoo Chee's years was a troublous time and made his tory in the quarter; and one who would strike most bitterly at Hoo King, the suspected traitor to the Chee Kung Tong, would take, not the old man's life, but his son. The parents treasured their offspring because his existence insured the rightful worship at the graves they expected to fill; and so they made a baby of the boy, though he was of the age when some sons put on cue-strings and a man's estate; and they tried to discourage fascinations beyond the threshold. But every day the Infant saw the forbidden streets with deeper longings. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
